Today is the United Nations Human Rights Day. December 10th, a day commemorating the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, constitutes a moment of reflection and commitment to the promotion and protection of human rights. Albania supports the universality and indivisibility of human rights. The best defense of our rights and freedoms is inextricably linked with the development of a democratic society. To Albania, respect for human rights is a crucial element for the consolidation of democracy, rule of law and increase of the role of the individual in society. Likewise, the respect of fundamental freedoms and human rights constitutes the cornerstone of the exercise of our foreign policy.

Our country has solid indicators in meeting human rights' standards, a fact well-known and praised by international organizations. Therefore, together with its international partners, Albania contributes in addressing international crises where freedoms, human rights and human dignity are under threat. This year, December 10th finds Albania as a first time-elected member to the Human Rights Council. The choice of Albania in this well-respected international body constitutes an appreciation and additional guarantee for a consistent commitment to the promotion and protection of human rights. Albania was granted the observer status at the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance (IHRA). The decision was announced today during the II Plenary Session of Great Britain's Chairmanship of the IHRA. The IHRA observer status enables all stakeholders and experts of the academic, historical, scientific research, archives, educational and cultural field of Albania to apply for national or regional projects that promote religious and community coexistence, tolerance, peace and raise awareness on the avoidance of bias on ethnic and religious grounds.

In her welcoming remarks, the Head of the Albanian delegation in this meeting, Ms. Albana Dautllari, Director of the Economic and Public Diplomacy Directorate at the MFA, apart from the Albanian contribution to saving the lives of Jewish people during WWII, put the emphasis on the excellent interreligious coexistence in Albania as an example of tolerance of our society, where values and principles of religion serve the further democratization of the Albanian society in its path towards European integration.

Economic diplomacy in focus.

The activation and strengthening of economic diplomacy is one of the key priorities of the Albanian diplomacy. At a time when this issue is at the core of agendas of most foreign services around the globe and they are customizing their external services in this regard, Albania cannot stay behind. Economic diplomacy, whose main goal is to promote economic opportunities, potentials and natural, human and physical resources of Albania, needs to coordinate the work of all stakeholders, be they private or public.

For this reason, several objectives have been identified, among which the improvement of our country's image with regard to the development of free trade and foreign investment industries with a view to enable the increasing number of foreign direct investments in the country as an opportunity for improving the economic climate and welfare. In this regard, the MFA will continue to work in order to promote economic potentials and opportunities of Albania, to raise awareness and increase the interest for international participation and investments in strategic sectors of the Albanian economy, to find markets for exporting Albanian products, thus serving their increase and better geographical diversification, as well as to boost the overall level of bilateral economic cooperation. The integration and coordination of economic activities, both within the Foreign Ministry as well as with our Diplomatic Missions in the world or other institutions, brings an added value to the transmission of the message that we seek to convey, increases efficiency by eliminating duplication and is more efficient in financial terms.

In order to achieve this goal, the MFA is focused on training its diplomats, keeping in mind that the increase of their professional capacities in economic terms will play an important role in properly advertising certain aspects of the Albanian economy and trade, thus enabling a dignified representation of our country in the world. The role of economic diplomacy is comprehensive and provides, among other things, commitments related to foreign trade and import-export relations, negotiation and reaching of economic and trade agreements, as well as cooperation to eliminate divergences and harmonization of standards in the economic field. With a view to promote foreign enterprise, the MFA has worked for the signing of several agreements that facilitate the presence of foreign investors in the country, such as the agreements on investment protection and avoidance of double taxation with different countries, etc., while bilateral agreements concerning free trade have been on the daily agenda of any diplomat's work for quite some time.

Another important aspect of economic diplomacy is regional cooperation, which constitutes a very important and growing dimension of the Albanian diplomacy in general. Practice has shown that national interests and the liberalization of national economies have been facilitated and significantly favored within the framework of mechanisms and instruments of a clear regional focus. The removal of borders and the opening of markets is achieved more easily and successfully in a regional context. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, through the Directorate of Economic and Public Diplomacy will continue to cooperate with other ministries and chambers of commerce for organizing events such as the weeks of Albanian products, business forums, promotion of Albanian tourism, presentations and roundtables, etc., focusing on the foreign public, aiming to increase the presence of Albanian goods in the foreign markets and promote foreign investments in the country.
